Leadership Program

Our Leadership program provides the insights that will help you to build yourself as a leader

Through intensive self-discovery, peer coaching, and one-on-one coaching, you will achieve a deep understanding of yourself and your leadership style. You will be guided in creating a powerful personal development plan to fully realize your leadership potential.

Available via Live, In-person delivery

Attend the program in an immersive, in-person environment at the Donald Gordon Conference Centre, located in Kingston, Ontario and adjacent to the Queen's University campus.

Learning Objectives / Key Takeaways

In this program you will learn:

- How your colleagues perceive you and your leadership style
- Authentic communication skills
- Strategies to create enthusiasm and lead others to peak performance
- About networking with other industry and organization leaders
- How to inspire team members to reach their personal best through small, but impactful interactions

Additionally, this program incorporates the use of three powerful and transformational tools:

Charismatic Leadership Assessment: During the program, individuals will prepare and deliver a short speech in front of a small team of fellow participants. This learning tool is used to evaluate participants' use of the charismatic leadership tactics taught during the program. Speeches will be recorded and each participant will receive feedback and recommendations from a certified leadership expert, post-program.

Personal Leadership Exercise: Work with an executive coach to prepare a plan to address a leadership challenge you are currently facing.

The Attentional & Interpersonal Style (TAIS) Assessment: Learn how your tendencies in interpersonal style will benefit and hinder you, and develop strategies for building on strengths and shoring up weaknesses.

This program is designed for managers and leaders who want to inspire their teams to peak performance, strengthen their own leadership skills, and achieve their organization's strategic goals with stronger, more committed teams. The program is particularly suited for managers and leaders who have been managing teams for a minimum of five years.

This program focuses on six themes

Transformational Leadership: You will learn to communicate a vision clearly and authentically by inspiring, creating enthusiasm, and bringing out the best in others. Through coaching and mentoring people for peak performance, you will be better prepared to address behaviour and performance issues effectively and with confidence.

Personal Leadership Style: You will reflect on your leadership strengths and areas for development. By identifying aspects of your leadership style that could create barriers to your success, you will learn to develop approaches for using your influence more positively and effectively.

Action Learning: During a series of situational exercises that mirror the workplace, you will learn to diagnose and address problems that undermine individual and team effectiveness. By enhancing your communication skills, you will build insight and self-understanding through structured feedback in team meetings and problem-solving.

Situational Exercises: You will have the opportunity to practice giving and receiving feedback, which will enhance your decision-making and problem-solving skills. Develop your coaching skills by working with fellow participants in the program and develop an ability to handle leadership dilemmas with integrity by bringing out the best in others.

Advanced Coaching: Work with an executive coach to help you prepare an effective strategy for developing your leadership capabilities and avoiding past mistakes.

Action Plan: Develop and commit to an action plan for making positive change in your leadership behaviour by setting objectives and timelines for your progress. Build high-performance expectations into your everyday management practices and create a plan to coach and mentor the people around you. Translate your personal vision into tangible actions on the job in your day-to-day work.

A Recognized Symbol of Excellence

Participants who complete the program earn the Leadership digital badge credential.

Schedule

This program runs roughly 9:30am to 5:00pm eastern time each day, with individual and group work in the evenings. Breaks for lunch and dinner will be provided each day.
